Keynote Speakers

Paul Moya – A successful entrepreneur and speaker who has inspired innovative thought and positive change in the corporate and leadership sectors all over the globe. His sterling reputation in the business world is credited to playing a vital role in creating success & opportunity for corporations and individuals alike. Formally educated at Harvard and Notre Dame, Paul has solidified his reputation as a leading Generation Y and Millennials speaker by drawing crowds, - as large as 54,000 - to his engagements in nearly all 50 states and 3 continents. Few speakers have achieved this status – and even fewer who are part of Generation Y. He is able to understand this enigmatic generation and use humor and audience interaction to provide forward-thinking initiatives, progressive strategies and effective solutions to clients. Paul owns one type of footwear: cowboy boots. Regardless of where he is in the world, he can usually be spotted proudly wearing a bowtie and his cowboy boots! Aside from being a next generation consultant and speaker, Paul is an international volunteer, self-proclaimed nerd, down-to-earth family man and sometimes cowboy who enjoys spending time on the family farm, making new friendships and pretending to be an avid food critic.

Nick Yphantides, MD, MPH – Back by popular demand, “dr. Nick” is an advocate for those in his community who need it most. He currently serves as the Chief Medical Officer for San Diego County and its 3.2 million resident (1% of America’s population). He is the Founding Co-Chair of San Diego’s Childhood Obesity Initiative, was the CMO of one of the largest network of Community Clinics in San Diego County, and was publically elected Chairman of the Board of Palomar Health, the largest public hospital district in California. He is thankful for the fact that he has never served a patient with private insurance in his life. As a result of personal health transformation, he now advocates for population health transformation. Dr. Nick is a cancer survivor and has been to as many countries as he is old. His daughters, Veronique and Zoe, are the joy of his life. For the past three years, he has given the “Welcome to San Diego” at the EMSAAC Conference and was so well received that he has been asked to be the Keynote Speaker on Day 2 of the conference this year. You will walk away full of new insights into public health and EMS.
